

Dear Sirs,

I am a flight attendant with Northwest Airlines, previously with Lufthansa Airlines with a total years of service of 24 years.

Please do NOT allow cell phone calls inflight! Most of the time, passengers are tired, bless their hearts, even during the day, and a good 30 - 70% are usually taking a nap. They've had a hard day at work or wherever, often they have to get up really early to catch their flight, and they want to sleep. Somebody yelling at high volume into their cell phone will wake most, if not all the cabin.

Do the wishes of a few outweigh the needs of the many? Do you want to create conditions for even more air rage?

Also, in the event of an emergency, you can bet they will ALL want to be on their cell phones, even during the crash itself, and they will not be paying attention to the flight attendants trying to save their lives! This could cost even more lives.

Please do NOT allow cellphones inflight! Respond to the needs of the many, not the wishes of the few.

Thank you.

Sincerely,

J. Hawki
